Advice is Given to The Motor Tourists

Precautions as a Safeguard For Health of Tourists

It is now coming to the season when people will be travelling by motor and trailers. The Health League advises that precautions should be taken as a safeguard for health. Careful attention should be taken to the use of milk, drinking water and sanitary disposal.

In the case of doubtful supply the water should be boiled or treated with chemical supplied by the Health Department.

If pasteurized milk is not obtainable, the milk should be heated to 142 to 145 F. and held at this temperature for 30 minutes.

Sanitary disposal problems offer the chief danger as sources of water supply may easily become polluted.

The Health League suggests that the provincial governments provide the necessary accommodation and that a general policy as to tourist regulations be adopted. The Health League's address is 105 Bond St., Toronto.

Backbenchers Are Now Getting Prise for Action

Trouble Now Between Cabinet And Back Benchers

In looking back over the past nineteen months a large percentage of the citizens of the province of Alberta are reviewing conditions and discussing the problem which are now confronting the province and its people.

Going back to August, 1935, question came up as to the civil political parties and the promise of the emancipation of those who had neither food, clothing or shelter which was promised by the present government. During that election bitterness developed as never before during an election, between those who advocated the Social Credit system and those who did not believe a fountain pen would solve all our problems.

Today conditions have changed. The bitterness is not now between the fountain pen artists and the old political parties, but between the fountainpensers themselves.

For the past eighteen months Social Credit government officials have been blaming the old political parties and the old political parties for the delay in the promised dividends, but now a large percentage of the elected Social Credit members of the back benches are putting the Premier and his cabinet on the spot.

For the past few weeks S.C. members and an ex-cabinet minister are more severe in their criticism of Mr. Abernethy and his cabinet than any of the old party members.

There is no doubt that S.C. members who are now labeled as insurgents are getting considerable praise from the public for having the back bone to try to force the government to at least attempt to fulfill their pre-election promises and make an effort to put the Social Credit system into operation.

Now that the legislature has adjourned till June in order to find out whether or not Social Credit principles can be put into operation, keen interest will be taken in developments by the public.

First Trans-Atlantic Air Terminal in America Built in Newfoundland

America's first trans-Atlantic air terminal, one of the largest air terminals in the world, is rising out of the virgin wilderness of Newfoundland, land not far from the spot where the first flight across the Atlantic was started eighteen years ago.

Nine miles from St. John's, at a site known as Hatley's Camp, British Empire groups are constructing their first air base on this side of the ocean as a way station of arrival and departure for giant liners which are soon to be winging across the stormy North Atlantic to the United States, Ireland and Britain.

Because of the inaccessibility of the location, little news has leaked out concerning the real progress made. Today, however, the first new station along the Newfoundland railway, labeled, "Newfoundland Airport," trains of flat cars have been pushing back and forth between the airport site and the coastal ports for several months on one of the big construction projects ever undertaken in this colony. The trains have been transporting men and machinery to the new station.

Since early last spring, an army of 350 men, well equipped with machinery, trucks, tractors, bulldozers, steam shovels, scrapers, sledges, compressors and other equipment, has carved a square mile of ground out of the heavily forested wilderness, laying foundations for the four great buildings that will mark the field. A short distance away from the main building, the first clearing has been made for the installation of a great machine or hangar which will be operated in conjunction with the land airfield for trans-Atlantic flying.

Following a series of preliminary surveys made by engineers of Imperial Airways, the British Air Ministry and colonial officials, this airport site was decided upon because of the uniformly clear approaches available from all directions. Actual clearing work was begun in May last year, on a program which works the expenditure of more than $50,000 already allotted for the work.

The Newfoundland Airport, it was pointed out, is to be the main American operating base for the trans-Atlantic service of Imperial Airways. At the Newfoundland base, will be the large storage and work hangar, the shop facilities and the main railway and motorized stations of the trans-oceanic service. Plans also indicate that living quarters will be provided for a sizable resident base force, as well as a large number of men who may stay here overnight awaiting transfer to trans-Atlantic airlines or connections to Canada or the United States.

At the present time, about 300 men are being quartered on the field in temporary structures. The plan gives way, as the work progresses, to large modern administration offices, mess halls and public buildings, and other buildings. On the unflooded field, the four runways already have been marked off. Three of these are 2,000 feet long and 500 feet wide each, intersecting each other at an angle of 45 degrees. The fourth and main runway will be about 5,000 feet long and 1,200 feet in width.

These runways are now being graded and each will have a complete drainage system of its own. They are to be surfaced with asphalt for their entire length and width. In addition, there are added surface extending beyond the asphalt limits at either end.

The workmen are extending clearings from the end of these runways, for about a half mile, in each clear approach from all directions. A series of lights, embedded flush with the runway surface, will be installed for night operation to supplement the standard flood lighting and boundary markings. As an indication of the size of the airport expected in the future, these runways will be capable of handling craft weighing up to 20,000 pounds.

While no official word has been given out concerning the project, it is understood that only one or two of the runways is completed for use this coming spring, when it is said the first experimental flights over the new ocean airway will be made.

A 10-foot alpaine hill bearing a nameplate "P.O. 2201 A," was found on a beach at Battery Island, B.C. Secretary of the B.C. Alpine Club, Vancouver. Leading gear and equipment was missing but the site was otherwise unimportant. Apparently it had been in the water for some time.

Rust Resistant Wheat

New Thatcher Strain Appears To Have Hardy Qualities

In the hybridizing of wheat that has resulted in the rust resistant Thatcher, perhaps the cereals have given to the world something better than is generally known, if the experience of one woman at Simsbury, Me., proves to be a characteristic of the grain.

May 16, 1934, a lady who had received a small parcel of sample Thatcher wheat, planted the kernels in her garden plot. It grew and thrived well. When about three inches above the ground, a horse pulled on it, and pressed every blade firmly into the ground. It looked as if it could have stood up to it.

A few days later the wheat was up and doing, and by the first of July it looked like a bumper crop. It did not look quite so good July 2, for a patriotic cow grazed Dominion Day in the garden and pruned the wheat stems down to within four inches of the ground.

But even that experience did not prevent the Thatcher wheat from growing up strong and healthy again. It ripened by Aug. 10, the lady did not harvest it. Just then, and a day or two later, a band of thieves had a splendid feed off the golden grain, taking their share of the harvest of the ripe kernels. Then the lady decided it was time to salvage what she could, and this year she will have close to 3,000 kernels for seed.

The lady plans to protect this year's crop, and to really give the grain a chance to show what it can do, under ordinary conditions. It is a grain leader-just.

Just Another Man

Time-keeper Al Mine Did Not Recognize Governor-General's Name

The time office at the Fred Mine in Sulphur has accidentally been let in on a deep secret. It has discovered that Lord Tweedsmuir in the Governor-General of Canada.

It was during His Excellency's visit that a reporter called the big mine to find out if he had gone down the shaft.

"Is Lord Tweedsmuir going underground today?" asked the scribbler.

"What level does he work on?" inquired the voice at the other end.

Slowly and distinctly the reporter repeated the name.

"Lord Tweedsmuir . . . he was to have gone underground today . . . do you know whether he made it?"

"Say listen, came theasperated reply. "We have 3,000 men working for us, sir. Do you think we know them all by name?"

"We merely wanted to know if the Governor-General of Canada was going to visit the mine today," said the reporter.

"Oh, him? Why didn't you say so?" came the voice from the time office. "He's down underground right now."

New Idea For Holidays

Doctor Thinks Many People Should Spend Them In Bed

Dr. Alfred Cox, general secretary of the British Health Resorts Association, does not agree with the present distribution of holidays. Speaking at the Institute of Hygiene on "Holidays in Winter," he said that the man who had to do necessary domestic or disagreeable work ought logically to have the longest spell of holidays. The sick, who had done nothing to earn a holiday, ought either to be compelled to go on "killing time," or, perhaps, better still, be given a job of really hard work.

Dr. Cox advocated a holiday in bed. There were a good many thousands of people who never get sufficient sleep, he said.

Study Newspaper Practices Only One In Canada

Unwearable Intrusion Into Private Family Affairs To Be Reviewed

"Unwearable intrusion by newspaper into private family affairs and other impractical practices in the collection news" will be studied by a conference sponsored by the Institute of Journalists, the National Union of Journalists, the Newspaper Proprietors' Association, the Newspaper Society and various other organizations in the news field in Britain.

"The idea of such a conference," commented the World's Press News, "met a mixed reception in Fleet Street. Though many believe that peering the views of journalists and proprietors would be of considerable assistance in dealing with future occurrences, other state that following many resolutions passed by proprietorial bodies and news agencies there is little more to be said."

"Nearly all agree, however, that it is virtually impossible to lay down any hard and fast rules in such a matter. Circumstances vary in so-called human interest stories and treatment largely depends on the individual discretion of the editor or news editor."

A recent questionnaire showed British editors in general opposed to "needless intrusion on private grief," but in many cases lack of police and other official information was blamed as making the alleged intrusion necessary.

Smile's Little Trivia Amusing Story About One Of His Books

Smile's Little Trivia, the American novelist, one of whose novels has recently been banned in Canada, was going to visit the mine today, said the reporter.

"Oh, him? Why didn't you say so?" came the voice from the time office. "He's down underground right now."

"The world," he said to himself. "Here and I, Smile's Little Trivia, did there is an unknown but obviously cultured woman absorbed in one of my books." Next instant he saw the reader close the book with a furious gesture, and there it into the ocean!

Old Time Table Etiquette

Manners Have Changed But Eating Implements Not The Same

Digging into the history of eating, scientists came up with the assertion that civilization's first fork users were called stumps.

"Italians," explained the National Geographic Society, "were the first to use forks for eating, and were ridiculed as over-fastidious or even effeminate."

The table manners research was launched after a joint expedition of National Geographic Society and Smithsonian Institution scientists uncovered some 1,000-year-old spoons in Alaska.

"These ancient utensils," the scientists reported, "give a vivid picture of the life 30 centuries ago, but they also remind us that although table manners have changed, eating implements of today are essentially the same as in prehistoric times."

They happened to add that the Eskimos still cling to the age-old use of his knife. This consists of stuffing his mouth with meat and then whacking off the remainder with a swift stroke that barely misses his nose.

While the fork, which was introduced in the late 14th century, didn't batter down the barriers of convention until the 17th century, it's to that time the best table etiquette called for the time-honored method of picking up food with the thumb and the first two fingers.

"Use of more fingers," explained the scientists, "was considered bad table manners."

No Handicap To Success at University of Michigan law school has issued a diploma to a "blind student—second such occurrence in the college's history."

As an example being held in no handicap to success he points to his friend comedian Judge Ned Smith, of Detroit, who other blind person to receive a law degree from University of Michigan.

Averages Are Deciding

British Minister Tells An Amazing Story To Prove It

"Don't have anything to do with averages," advised Sir Thomas Inskip, Minister for the Co-ordination of Defence, in a speech in London, when he told this story:

"Recently the Ministry of Health issued a book dealing with a mysterious malady which affected people of the average age of 48 years. Those declared that they had suffered of such a disease. Then it was discovered that the only persons who ever had it were a baby one year and a man aged 95."

Quick Results

An old man fell from a fountain of youth pain. He paid a huge sum, was given six pills and instructed to take one each day for six days. Instead he took all six at once.
